NEW TMU INTEGRATED HEALTH CENTRE NAMING RECOGNIZES 407 ETR SUPPORT FOR DRIVING HEALTH CARE ACCESS AND TRAINING

On March 26, Toronto Metropolitan University (TMU) announced a transformative $7.5 million gift from 407 ETR in support of the TMU School of Medicine. The announcement was made at an official ribbon-cutting ceremony at TMU's flagship Integrated Health Centre in Brampton.

In recognition of the historic investment, the clinic will be named the TMU Integrated Health Centre supported by 407 ETR. Located in TMU's Brampton medical school campus, the Integrated Health Centre is directly connected to the School of Medicine and will serve as a primary site for experiential learning while expanding access to team-based primary care in one of Ontario's fastest-growing regions.

The gift will help drive forward solutions to Peel Region's critical shortage of family physicians. Together with a second Integrated Health Centre (IHC) location in downtown Brampton, the clinics will bring much needed care to more than 14,000 patients who don't currently have a family doctor.

A defining feature of the TMU School of Medicine is its dual-impact model: training the next generation of physicians while creating net-new clinical capacity. By establishing new teaching clinics in underserved communities, the school is increasing immediate access to care while preparing future doctors to practise in team-based, community-focused environments.

The 407 ETR gift will also unlock an additional $7.5 million through a previously announced $25 million matching commitment from Orlando Corporation. This matching effectively doubles the impact of the donation, directing a total of $15 million toward the transformation of the former Bramalea Civic Centre into a state-of-the-art medical school facility.

PEEL REGIONAL POLICE FUN DAY – MAY 16
