

Stakeholder Update #4 (September 2010)

The applicant, Brampton Brick, advised the City that it submitted its Aggregate License application to the Ministry of Natural Resources. The MNR will review all documentation and technical reports submitted with the application to determine if it is complete. A complete submission does not constitute support of the application or indicate that the material contained in the supporting documentation will be acceptable.

Once the application is deemed complete, the applicant may proceed with the 45-day notification and consultation period, which includes a mandatory public information session. There is no time limit for the applicant to initiate this process. The notification period will begin when all details of the information session are published in the local newspaper. City staff anticipate the applicant is likely to proceed with such notice towards the end of this year.

Members of the public will be invited to attend the open house, where the applicant will be required to present and explain all the details of the proposal. Any member of the public or agency may submit written comments to the MNR within the 45-day notification period.

City staff continue to evaluate the proposal submissions from potential peer review consultants to review the technical reports that Brampton Brick has submitted related to its proposed applications. City staff expect to submit a report to Planning, Design and Development Committee later this year to provide details on the status of the rezoning application and the application for license submitted to the MNR.
